GOLF CLUB D'HOSSEGOR

The Golf Course

The Golf Club d'Hossegor was created in 1930 and was part of a large plan to build a seaside resort for refined sports from scratch.

The town is renowned for its architectural elegance and abundance of sporting opportunities, with endless, wild sandy beaches. The resort town is also considered a perfect surf spot which hosts the annual world surf championship.

Located within the center of town and close to a large recreational lake and the ocean, the Hossegor golf course attracts many visitors and is considered one of the top golf courses in France. It has a typical British golf course design, idyllically imbedded within a pine tree and cork oak forest which protects it from the ocean winds.

A progressive upgrade of the golf course was undertaken between 2003 and 2011, which respected the original design thanks to the talent of the golf architect Cabell Robinson.

The Hossegor Golf Club hosts many national and international championships, including the prestigious 'Grand prix des Landes' (classified "elite"), receiving many talented international and French players over the years. The members of the club and the management team are looking forward to hosting the upcoming European Senior's Championship, which will see the arrival of many players and guests from a variety of countries.

The club eagerly anticipates the opportunity to welcome back returning players and equally newcomers who are looking to discover the Hossegor golf course.
