Golf de Fontainebleau is located in the eponym forest, one of the biggest in France, located about 60 kilometres south of Paris, which has been for nearly 1000 years a great hunting place for all French monarchs and where they built, over centuries, the Palace described by Napoleon the 1st as “the real home of our kings”.

Slightly more than 100 years ago, in 1908, a group of friends decided to build there a golf course, which was still quite rare at that time in France and chose for this purpose a part of the forest located just outside the city. After a few months with nine holes the course reached 18 holes designed by Frenchman Julien Chantepie, and was inaugurated on September 1909 by Arnaud Massy, the only French winner of The Open (so far!), James Braid and John Henry Taylor. A few years later, Tom Simpson, the great British, architect remodelled the course to give it the design which lasted broadly unchanged for more than 50 years. Then, in 1965, some members thought it was time to update the course to make it more challenging by modern standards, task devoted to Fred Hawtree whose son, Martin, keeps coming regularly to advise us and always keep the course “alive”.

Fontainebleau's course has the privilege to wind through very old oaks, birch and pine trees, as well as plenty of heather and sandstone rocks (the sea was there a few million years ago!). It has also the luck to be built on a totally sandy soils, which allows it to remain dry year-round. It is always regarded as one of the very best French and even continental Europe courses.

Private club with some 300 adult golfing members (and more than 100 young players!), but open to visitors on week days, Fontainebleau has often hosted major individual or team events, including every year in the spring, for nearly a century, the Coupe Mouchy which gathers all the best French male amateurs.

All its members will be absolutely delighted to welcome EGA's Ladies' Club Trophy and will endeavor to make all players and officials fully enjoy their stay to Fontainebleau.
